MUSIG FOR SEASON

JULIUS KRANZ PLANS LETTING PUBLIC HEAR HIS OWN COMPOSITIONS

Deprived of the opportunity of studying in Europe on account of the war, Mr. Julius Kranz, the well-known youthful violinst of 1325 N. Brand boulevard, has been devoting himself all summer to the study of composition. Already, under the able tuition of Mr. Henry Schoonfeld, of Los Angeles, Mr. Kranz has made vast progress in composition. Before the close of last season the music-loving public of Glendale had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Kranz play some of his own compositions. The beauty of these and their advanced character afforded an agreeable surprise.

Since then the youthful musician has been perfecting his work. At present he is in treaty with musical firms in the east for the sale of several of his compositions. Among these works are three songs of special beauty—a lullaby, a love song and a nature song. For the violin Mr. Kranz has composed a berceuse, a serenade and a tarantelle; for the piano a waltz and a minuet.

These compositions have already attracted attention and on the advice of his own instructor, Mr. Henry Schoenfeld, he has sent them to eastern purchasers by whom they are being appraised. Mr. Schoenfeld thinks very highly of Mr. Kranz' compositions and Mr. Schoenfeld is a very competent judge of such matters. He studied in Germany under the best masters and was a personal friend of the world-famous composer Brahms. In this country Mr. Schoenfeld has done some excellent work in the way of original composition and recently won the Marteau prize in Berlin for the best American sonata. At present he is director of the Women's orchestra in Los Angeles. That an authority of Mr. Schoenfeld's standing should think so highly of Mr. Kranz' efforts is proof of their merit.

"I have at present," said Mr. Julius Kranz to a representative of the Glendale Evening News, "sixteen pupils. These are studying violin and are making rapid progress. I hope to be able to give a concert within a month which will enable the public to see what can be done with amateur talent. I hope to be able to present at that concert some of my own compositions and would like to give also Mr. Schoenfeld's famous American sonata. If I cannot give it at my first concert I will present it later on.

"I am also preparing two of my own songs for string orchestral work and my pupils are making excellent progress with them. I have learned a great deal of the technique of the different violin schools and hope to learn a great deal more. I do not believe in pinning one's faith to one school alone. There are transcendent merits in the German school and there are infinite beauties in the Italian school. Each has its technique and its faith. I have endeavored to draw from both.

"That is, I believe, the method pursued by modern violinists. It is a kind of eclecticism in music, which has been found to be highly successful. Each country has its own particular genius and it is well to gain inspiration from all. That prevents one from becoming stereotyped and non-responsive. When the war is over I hope to go to Europe and drink in the inspiration of the great men there at first hand. I am sure that the mere living in the musical atmospheres of the older countries is a species of education in itself. How much more is then to be gained when one sits at the feet of the profound geniuses who have moved the world with their art.

"Nothing has pleased and encouraged me more than the appreciation and consideration I have met with among my own people in Glendale and Los Angeles. The people of Glendale have been exceedingly kind to me and have given me often the stimulus I needed for going ahead with my work, I hope to show my many kind friends this winter that my time has not been wasted and to meet with their further kind approval."

TITANIC WAR AT HAND

REV. JOHN TROY TELLS OF FUTURE BATTLE WHICH WILL INVOLVE THE NATIONS

A splendid audience listened to the lecture on Armageddon delivered at the First Baptist church Sunday evening. The teacher made his position clear. He certainly does not expect universal peace for some time to come.

"Prophecy indicates with certainty that Armageddon is a future battle which will involve the nations of the earth, and that the exact location of this coming conflict is found in Palestine, upon the plains of Esdraelon before Mt. Megiddo. It will be the revival of an ancient battlefield of the nations approaching from the north and the south to the heart of the Holy Land. Israel (the Jews) will be greatly concerned in the issues of the titanic struggle. Restored to their own land under the protection of a northern nation in control of Turkey, God's peculiar people will be deceived into a covenant which after three and a half years will be torn up by the mighty potentate of the north as being only a scrap of paper. The supposed benefactor of the chosen people will become their worst persecutor. Then will follow such a time as has not been since the beginning of creation, the day of Jacob's trouble, a conflict of arms beyond the conception of human imagination to portray. The revelation of Jesus Christ, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, followed by the armies in heaven, will give final victory to the saints of the Most High. And then, and not till then, will be introduced the everlasting kingdom of universal peace. Watch the Jews.

Commencing Sunday evening and continuing every night, John Troy will lecture on the present world crisis in the light of prophecy. A great opportunity for Bible students.

This evening at the midweek service of the Baptist church the lecture will be on Solomon's dedicatory prayer at the opening of the temple. Visitors invited.

He moved a new war credit of $1,125,000,000, bringing the total British war loans to $6,310,000,000. At the beginning of the war financial experts who estimated the daily cost of the war as high as $20,000,000 a day were ridiculed. During the first 17 days of July the daily average was $15,882,000 and prior to May 4, $10,500,000. BACK TO PROTECTION

J. W. T. MASON SAYS BRITISH WILL ABANDON FREE TRADE TO MEET WAR EXPENSE

According to J. W. T. Mason, correspondent of the United Press, the British are on the eve of abandoning their world-famous free-trade policy in favor of protection. It has taken nothing less convincing than a great war to convert them to the policy that has built up American trade to its present commanding position. Great Britain has always been opposed to protection, although some of its greatest men have during the past decade advanced a change to that system.

Now, however, faced by the greatest expenditure in her history, she intends to make a complete reversal of her ancient policy and meet war expenses by means of taxation instead of by loans. It is believed that the new duties will remain a permanent institution.

FOOD AT THE FAIR

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA HAS FINE EXHIBIT OF FISH AND FRUIT AT SAN FRANCISCO

Southern California's exhibit in the Palace of Food Products plays an important part in that building. One of the principal products featured in this exhibit is canned tuna. The waters off the coast of Southern California abound in tuna of all varieties and they have been the source of a new and great industry in the south.

A great number of fish canneries have been established in Southern California during recent years and today they are exporting canned fish to all parts of the globe. The tuna caught in Southern California waters are famous not only for their gameness but for their flavor when properly canned.

Southern California, which has often been termed "the land of flowers," is nessarily a land of honey. Honey is produced in the south by the ton and it is of the very best quality. In the Food Products exhibit Southern California is showing strained and comb honey as well as bees wax from the aparies of the southern part of the state.

Another feature of the exhibit, which has attracted general attention, is the showing of candied flowers, which are peculiar to Southern California. This feature comes from Pasadena and the flowers retain their natural color and in some instances their perfume. Among the candied flowers are carnations, Cecil Bruner roses, Cherokee roses, narcissis, violets, sweet peas and poppies. The flow rs are edible but are very fragile and must be handled with great care. This confection is an innovation in the art of candy making.

Candied figs and oranges are shown in abundance and have attracted the universal interest of the public.

SIGNALS AT CROSSINGS

As part of the general effort of the railroad commission to lessen the danger to life and limb in the operation of railroads in the state, thirty-two automatic wigwag warning signals will be installed at grade crossings of the Pacific Electric railway in Southern California. After a thorough investigation by the experts of the commission, the railway has voluntarily agreed to protect 32 more crossings by these automatic signal devices. They are the largest number of safety installations ever agreed upon at one time by any company, on the suggestion of the commission, and constitute a long step forward in the direction the commission has been urging the railroads. The question of making crossings safer in Los Angeles county, either by departure from grades, over or underneath the tracks, or by flagmen or automatic signals, has been the subject of conferences in Los Angeles between the railroad commission, governmental and civic bodies, and the railroads, in the last few weeks.

The 32 crossings which are to be side, Orange and San Bernardino counties, covering the entire territory in which the Pacific Electric railway operates.

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD ROADS

When one observes how quickly improvements take place in a district after its roads have been improved one gets an object lesson on the importance of having well-made highways throughout the land. If it should ever be necessary to rush the citizen troops of the country to the defense of the seashore many new roads now under construction would prove an invaluable investment. Meanwhile they are daily building up the business of the country and stretching their civilizing influence on every hand.

It is stated that already, in remote districts, where the great Lincoln highway is beginning to exert its modrenizing influence, a vast improvement is observable in the demeanor, language and dress of the inhabitants. In those regions they formerly seldom saw the face of an outsider. Now automobile after automobile is making its way across hitherto neglected stretches of territory, and the people are waking up to find themselves still of the world and to try to measure up to its standards.

Naturally there is no good effected in any one section of a country without its immediately making its influence felt in some other part or rather equally and in all directions. Thus the good roads have been found to benefit the farmer. He saves money on hauling his produce to town, where formerly he had to expend considerable cash to pay the railroads. Not a day passes but one can see along Sherman Way or any of the other great highway arteries of Los Angeles and Glendale scores of auto trucks carrying farm produce into the cities.

Brought thus into immediate touch with the city and its civization the country district at once begins to lose its awkwardness. if any such existed, and comes into line with the city. Indeed so closely have the good roads of the land begun to bind communities together that the country district is benefiting by the culture and accomplishments of talented men and women who would formerly have been shut off from them as though by a great gulf.

Indeed it is impossible to exaggerate the value and importance of good roads. The old saying, "All roads lead to Rome," arose out of the fact that the Romans were the greatest road builders of the old world. Thence came great part of their hold on the countries they subdued. Out of Rome radiated magnificent highways, stretching in every direction like the spokes of a wheel. Forty thousand miles of these highways were constructed in Europe alone. Along those wonderful highways marched the troops that subdued the whole of the known world of those days. Those roads are still in existence in many parts of Europe.

What the good roads do for the district they do in as great measure for the land at large. They knit together its most remote parts. They bring friends from the eastern seaboards to their friends on the Pacific shores. They open the minds of the citizens who travel to the wonders of their own country and make them content to dwell in so marvelous and beautiful a land.

As civilizers good roads have no equal. As instruments in broadening the understanding and increasing the knowledge of the people they are unrivaled. The automobile has developed the good roads and the good roads respond by developing the automobile. Meanwhile, as the Scripture prophesied, by these many are running to and fro andknowledge is being increased.

WARLIKE MOVES IN MEXICO

It is difficult to state what is behind the increasing raids by Mexicans on the United States frontier. To judge from some of the utterances of Mexican newspapers there is a whole century of hatred behind the present feeling with regard to the United States in Mexico. It is a very significant comment on the sentiment there that Americans returning on visits from Mexico are very reticent as to conditions in that country. Questioned as to the reason for their silence the more courageous will tell you that it is as much as their lives are worth to say anything regarding the situation there.

From all that can be gathered it is pretty nearly certain that the Mexicans think they would have a chance to withstand any attempt on the part of this country to annex that land. It is equally certain that the Mexicans believe that there is a determination on the part of this country to annex Mexico. There is an inherent incapacity on the part of the average Mexican to understand the ideals and aims of the American government. The majority of Mexicans believe that the people of the United States are a set of bandits. The leaders who know better nourish that opinion in the people's minds. "Well," said a Mexican lady to a representative of The Glendale Evening News the other day, "are the Mexicans not justified in so believing, when they reflest on the history of Texas, California and New Mexico which once belonged to Old Mexico?" That sentiment seems to be behind much of the difficulty President Wilson is having in dealing with Mexico at the present time.

Then, too, there is the feeling among the Mexican people that their land has been and is being exploited by foreigners. The excessively liberal concessions obtained by companies like the Mexican Peroleum, the English Pierson and the American Standard Oil companies in the enormously rich oil fields has bitterly incensed the native Mexican, who has seen the richest portions of his land taken away for nothing by foreigners who make the profits and give him the hard work.

All these things combined with the incessant agitation of the outside capitalist who desires to see the United States march into Mexico in order that the value of his ranch lands or his mines may be increased, have brought about a hatred of foreign meddling that makes the Mexican very difficult to manage.

These things are behind the present condition on the border where Mexicans under some of the sinister influences that desire to embroil this country with Mexico have been raiding the lands of Americans and have even killed American soldiers. It says a great deal for the patience of the nation that it has thus far refrained from aggravating the situation by demands for punishment of Mexico for the unauthorized acts of a few filibusters.

Approached in a spirit of calm the Mexican question should yield to arbitration. This week the American-Latin representatives are at work on the problem, in New York city, and the administration at Washington is hopeful of the result. Apparently they put some hope in Carranza and it is earnestly to be desired that he may not fail them.

THE FAMILY CAT

Occasionally a distinguished authority on health matters launches a preachment against cats. All of these are wasted. People who do not like cats may have their distaste for the feline members of the community heightened, but the other people, the ones who are fond of cats, won't believe a word of the abuse.

The several indictments against cats are that they are useless in the destruction of rats and mice; that they destroy birds, and that it is their faculy, habit and almost delight, to spread the germs of every disease of which humanity has become aware. Taking these indictments up in order:

Cats will keep any premises free of mice and rats, either killing the pests or driving them away. Accepting the germ theory to the extent that it must be accepted by the student of facts, here has been clear demonstration that the rat, particularly, is an active peril; that it not only is the carrier of disease, but that some of the most dreaded physical afflictions of the race are carried by it alone. Nothing approximating this has been proved against the cat, the accusations being of the same general character as hold the whiskers guilty of secreting microbes, later to be sown upon the breeze.

Cats do attack birds. This is to be regretted. They have the hunting instinct. But they do not appreciably reduce the bird total. So long as women wear in their hats the feathers of the butchered songster, and men engage in shooting the living beauties of the meadows and forests for market, it becomes them to speak lightly of this grave fault of catdom. Cats cannot be supposed to appreciate color or harmony, or to regard cruelty as immoral.

The cat is companionable, affectionate, and almost invariably gentle. It will scratch when its tail is pulled, in this fashion inculcating in youngsters a sense of good manners. In many a household its presence is welcome. It is scrupulously clean. The idea that it is a menace of health is considered by people who always have a cat, and whose boys and girls from babyhood have been healthy and happy playmates of the cat, as a mere superstition.—Exchange.

SPALDING MADE BASEBALL POPULAR

Anybody who would have called the late Al G. Spalding an angel, while he was on earth, would have done both the angels and Al Spalding an injustice, says the Pasadena Star. The noted sporting magnate did not profess to be angelic. But he did his countrymen who love outdoor sports a good turn in becoming practically the father of baseball, as it is played today. Every man whose daily burden is lightened and whose spirits are made buoyant by an exciting baseball game owes a debt of gratitude to Al G. Spalding. He helped mightily to put science and ginger into the game. He stood always for clean sport. Baseball is a game that is interesting and deservedly popular only when it is clean—when its plays and its players are above suspicion and when it is played without any gambling or semblance of gambling among the spectators.

When we come to rate men and women as we should, we will recognize our obligation of grateful appreciation to those who entertain us innocently and wholesomely—those who give us the means of recreation. Baseball is a game beloved of millions—a game in favor with many a saint as well as with some who are not so saintly. When rightly played it is not a demoralizing game; there is nothing harmful about it. As a vent for latent American enthusiasm there is no outdoor sport to compare with it. From the spectator's standpoint it is the one game that is worth seeing, season in and season out.

Because he did so much to put baseball upon the high, scientific plane it now occupies and because of the pleasure so many get from the game, let us cherish the memory of Al G. Spalding, "the father of baseball."

HORSES STILL IN DEMAND

Government reports indicate that there are about 23,000,000 horses in the United States and that every one of these horses is worth several dollars more than it would have brought a year or two ago. One wonders what all these horses can be used for. Surely they are not all employed on farms, neither are they all being used by the bareback performers in the circus. Possibly a certain number of them are doing duty on ranches in the West with a cowboy in the saddle, but we have our suspicions that there are more cowboys doing stunts before the moving-picture cameras today than there are to be found on all the plains of the West. No, the truth of the matter is this: The majority of those 23,000,000 horses are engaged in pulling some kind of a vehicle.

That the manufacturers of carriages and surreys are a numerous, happy, prosperous and optimistic bunch will be demonstrated at Cleveland, Ohio, during the week beginning Sept. 20, when the forty-third annual convention of the Carriage Builders' National association will take place, with a big exhibition in the Central armory. This is the oldest continuous trade organization in the United States. More than one thousand carriage builders are expected to be in attendance, together with a host of makers of parts, such as spokes and rims, springs, axles, leather, paint, varnish and other materials used in building vehicles.

"No, siree," said the secretary of this association, when the question was put to him, "they haven't run the horse out of business yet, and the reason is that he can be relied upon, wet or dry, good roads or bad, and besides that," he said, "there are still a few of the old-fashioned boys left in the towns and on the farms, who don't believe that driving with both hands is the ideal way to enjoy the moonlight and the society of the 'only girl.' There are some good, old-fashioned habits in this world that don't change. That's one of them."

The carriage business is a flourishing one in the United States, and it would be hard indeed to find another industry in which there are incorporated more brains, more ability and more honest capital than in the great American wholesale carriage manufacturing business.

WHAT THE WAR MOVES MEAN

(Special Correspondence)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the great world struggle cannot be indefinitely prolonged is the new indication given by David Lloyd-George in the prefatory statement to a book of his speeches, entitled "From Terror to Triumph." In it he intimated that Great Britain can have only three months more in which to organize its forces and resources to maximum efficiency. Unless immediate advantage is taken thereof, then Lloyd-George can see no hope for England.

In his statement the munitions minister quoted a "shrewd and sagacious observer" as telling him that "the course pursued by this country during the next three months would decide the fate of the war."

By that time winter will have set in, and if the allies are not then ready for an offensive campaign during the winter season, it is apparent that Lloyd-George believes there will be a "slouching into disaster."

"If vital decisions are postponed until too late," said his statement, significantly; "if we neglect to make ready for all probable eventualities; if, in fact, we give ground for the accusation that we are slouching into disaster, as if we were walking along the ordinary paths of peace, without an enemy in sight, then I can see no hope."

While this statement does not mean that Lloyd-George sees defeat ahead, it clearly indicates that he does foresee an inability on the allies' part to dictate terms of peace.

PRUNES SELL WELL

Tulare county has the largest output of prunes this year, says the Lindsay Gazette, of any season since the industry started in the county, and the yield will be far in excess of all previous records. Picking has begun and practically every orchard in the county now have sheets spread beneath their trees containing the luscious fruit. In spite of the heavy yield the price is higher than ever before, $29 per ton before being dried has been offered, which is double the price paid last year. This condition in price is said to be due to the almost total loss of the French prune crop, and this has caused a heavy demand for the California.

A Santa Ana man charged with insanity kicked the sheriff in the face and slapped the judge, rendering the work of the alienists comparatively simple.

THE MARKETING PROBLEM

During the past the idea has prevailed that in order to make money in agriculture the farmer must be educated along the line of production or the best and most profitable methods of growing crops and feeding livestock. Of late, however, this idea has broadened out until it has taken possession of the minds of the people that it is equally or even more important that farmers be fully informed as to the best and most practical methods of marketing the products which they have grown, of purchasing the raw materials for the farms, since the farmer is now a purchaser of raw materials in a similar sense as is the manufacturer, says Western Farm Life.

Heretofore the commission man has been the "goat" for all the agitation that has come up regarding the high cost of living, the low prices paid the consumer and the corresponding high price charged the consumer—in fact, the middleman has become so much abused of late years that he has been even charged up as the cause for poor crops, light or heavy rainfall, early frosts and all other discouragements which affect both the producer and consumer. All commission men have been classed alike as dishonest and worthy subjects for the penitentiary.

Conditions, however, are changing every day and both producers and consumers are beginning to realize that they are endowed with intellects the same as our commission men, and that by the proper use of their gray matter they can find ways and means of marketing their produce in a profitable way. The average farmer has been so accustomed to the practice of past generations to let others do the thinking for him that it has become natural for him to feel that he is incapable of thinking, planning and doing business for himself since he was born to be a cultivator of soil and a feeder of livestock, and is dependent on others for any business transaction.

Of late years the farmer is beginning to realize that he is fully capable of managing his own affairs, and instead of censuring the commission man or middleman, as the term is generally used, is placing the blame where it rightly belongs—on himself. He is beginning to understand that the profitable management of the farm requires as much business ability and brain power as does that of most any enterprise in the metropolitan cities. He is awakening to the value of printer's ink and a knowledge of the fact that the business of the country is transacted largely through advertising, which is the simplest, cheapest and surest way of bringing consumer and producer together.

Many farmers and fruit growers, after having sold their produce through some agency to which they have paid a liberal commission, have learned that they could have sold at even a better price within a few miles of their home.

They should advertise what they have to sell in their local and agricultural journals.—Pacific Fruit World.

TAFT'S BIRTHDAY

Former President William Howard Taft was 58 today. The present Yale professor was born in Cincinnati on Sept. 15, 1857. He was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1880. After he had been graduated from Yale and the Cincinnati Law school he worked as a reporter for the Cincinnati Times, and later for the Cincinnati Commercial. Then he became assistant prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, which was the beginning of his long service in public office.

Why Mrs. Eudemiller's Style Ideas Dominate The World Of Fashion

Instead of accepting the fashion dictates laid down by supposed authorities, Mrs. Eudemiller goes to the Fountain-head and becomes one of Fashion's creative forces. Instead of buying entirely the ideas of manufacturers, Mrs. Eudemiller goes with her own style ideas and has them faithfully reproduced for the benefit of her store alone.
The methods explain why Mrs. Eudemiller is foremost from the standpoint of style. The word "STYLE" as applied to Mrs. Eudemiller's Shop is not vague nor indefinite—but it takes little discrimination to see the difference that marks Mrs. Eudemiller's creations superior above all others.

EXCITING RING CONTEST

As a mute protest against police interference with their practice bouts, to which spectators were admitted, Spike Tatting and Kid Crochet, who ordinarily are Charley Hodge and Sam Taylor, staged a sewing contest in St. Paul, Minn. The boxers appeared with good-sized needles and a large sheet of cloth. In the ring they sewed desperately, became interwoven in the thread, and stuck their thumbs. As a finale, the referee, Kid Glove, held the contestants' bloody thumbs aloft to indicate a draw.

The town meeting convened promptly at 8 o'clock Friday evening. F. M. Ashby occupied the chair as usual. After announcing a meeting of the Christian Scientists which will be held every Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock and also announcing a dance to be given Saturday evening by the Monte Vista band the meeting was turned over to Mr. George H. Maxwell, executive committee chairman of the Reclamation society. A large audience was in attendance, attesting to the great interest the people are taking in this series of lectures on how to raise the family supplies from small tracts of land and also to help devise ways and means of producing something whereby the people may derive an income. Mr. Maxwell hopes that Littlelands may become an instructional community in the matter of solving the social, economic and industrial problems of American life. The standard for every one in these respects should be within the reach of every man, woman and child and any life lived below this standard should be counted as abnormal and yet the standard of living should be so high that all may be satisfied. To attain to this happy medium is the problem confronting the mass of people every where. The wise realize that this average standard is the ultima thule of civilization and must gradually be evolved. In fact, such condition will be an evolution. To this end the community should co-ordinate. "In all things needful there should be unity; in all things doubtful liberty, but in all things charity." The wisest and happiest are those who have eliminated not the needful things but the unnecessary." Mr. Maxwell said if every family had a small pen of chickens, pigeons, ducks and rabbits and a fifth for the family goat they could very easily dispense with lamb chops, steak, etc., substituting therefor broiled chicken, baked squab, roast duck and fried rabbit which would afford a variety sufficient for an epicure. The goat, he considers an important factor, eliminating as it would the necessity for using canned milk. Mr. Maxwell then read some extracts from an interesting letter from a lady in San Diego who, though a sculptor, is greatly interested in economic problems. She sent a recipe for a salad which upon first reading Mr. Maxwell thought might create laughter, but the said lady assured him that she had partaken of the salad herself and had found it both palatable and nourishing. The recipe called for a combination of alfalfa leaves, lettuce, nuts, oil, vinegar, etc. She quoted quite extensively from physicians and others who are versed in dietetics. Mr. Maxwell thought the idea was not more ridiculous than had seemed the idea when first proposed of eating the tomato or the potato which were both formerly raised only as ornaments and curiosities.

Mr. Hartranft thought that perhaps through the influence of Mr. Maxwell co-operating with the Chamber of Commerce some light industries might be secured to locate in the valley to help solve the problem of revenue which probably constitutes 33 1-4% of the material needs, the other 66 2-3% to be met by met by planting and raising necessary vegetables and fruits for family use. Mr. Hartranft then announced that beginning Saturday morning the Pacific Electric would run through cars from La Crescenta to Los Angeles. The following names were nominated from the floor for the executive committee: Mr. Wieman, Mr. Hartranft, Mr.Miles,, Mr. Trout, Mr. Hoffman, Mr. Kearney, Mr. Fairfield and Miss Gilmore. These names will be balloted upon at the next meeting. The three obtaining the highest number of votes will constitute the committee who will have the supervision of plans pertaining to the community welfare.

On motion of Dr. Kearney it was decided to change the hour of meeting hereafter from 8 o'clock to 7:30.

OYSTERS LEGAL TENDER

Oysters, says the bureau of fisheries, were legal tender when the Indians ruled America. Ah, those must have been the good old days, when a man could march down to the treasury with a shovel and a sack and come home a millionaire.

However, there was always the danger of confronting a man with a family that his children would eat three or four hundred thousand one-dollar bills when he wasn't looking.

We can almost see the busy little bank clerk shelling nicke's.

Probably the elite ate nothing but $5 gold pieces.

But, how could a man tell whether he was in a bank or a restaurant? Because the banker didn't wear aprons Maybe.

Fining a pauper may be a dignified proceeding, necessary to the maintenance of the law's dignity, and it can't hurt the pauper.

The scheme of sinking liners on suspicion is extremely unfortunate, particularly when adopted as the policy of a suspicious people.
